AMBASSADOR GROUP

"Sharp, good energy, would fit the team." That records how the conversation felt, and almost nothing the candidate did.

Evidence has four parts: what they did, under what conditions, with what result, and who checked it.

Impressions feel finished. The facts behind them are gone, so nobody in the debrief can test them.

Mark each line I or E. For every I, write the question that would have produced evidence.

Rate a criterion only where you have evidence. Write "not tested" everywhere else.

Your next notes will show which resolution you ran. You decide that before the candidate arrives.

Ambassador Group works with construction companies on exactly this.
